

Instead of indicating the preferable times for observation using green and red outlines, we decided to use highlighting (lighter sections of background) because that looked better visually with the dark background of our prototype. In addition, we did not have time to implement autocompletion in our location choice box, so the user selects from a list of predefined locations.